aiaVT 2002 excellence in architecture design awards

hanne williams, hon. aiaVT

(Five Awards for "Excellence in Architecture" were presented to four Vermont Architectural firms at the Annual Meeting and Design Awards Presentations of the Vermont Chapter of The American Institute of Architects in Montpelier, December 5, 2002.)

Duncan Wisniewski Architecture of Burlington won an Award for the Williston Interstate 89 Information Areas. The Jury:

[Williston I- 89 Information Areas]

"the project is inventive within a standard project type...It's fun, it is a complete work with a fine exterior envelope, detailed interior and an intriguing site plan." One juror commented "I like the light in day time and in the evenings, it must be fun to drive by these elegant lanterns."

Centerline Architects of Bennington were given two Awards; one for The Teich Residence in Dorset, Vermont, the other for the Mission Park Servery at Williams College in Williamstown, MA. The Jury:

The Teich Residence

"was an intriguingly refreshing solution to a typical suburban house with a garage."

Photography: Bob LaVallee

The Mission Park Servery

was an "elegant solution to a very challenging problem." The components were bold with out being trite and they liked the sense of composition carried through the plan, interior spaces and surfaces.

John Anderson Studio of Burlington was given an Award for Red Studios-Adler House in Waltham, Vermont. The Jury:

[Red Studios-Adler House]

This project had "great material sensibility" and the "design intention carried through at all levels."

A display of the winners and all of the other entries will be exhibited through out Vermont in 2003.

2002 anual meeting: a grand evening

ken bean, aia

The 2002 AIA Vermont Annual Meeting was held at College Hall, Vermont College in Montpelier on December 5th. Seventy-four members and guests enjoyed the blues and jazz music of Left Eye Jump with lead singer Dennis Willmott of Truex Cullins and Partners.

Stu Sutcliffe gave the President's Report on the programs and activities of the past year. He also informed members that they would be contacted by a board member by phone to complete a short survey to help the board determine interest areas for design of future meetings and activities to meet the needs of members. Stu thanked past president Michael Gohl for his many contributions and years of service as an officer.

Stu conducted the business portion of the meeting where the following slate of officers and new board members were elected.

President:
Kenneth Bean
Vice President:
Donna Leban

Secretary-Treasurer:
David Epstein
New Board Members:
Lauren Davis
Stephen Mosman
Guy Teschmacher

Steve Clark demonstrated the new AIA Vermont web site that will be on line in January. This new communication tool is designed to help serve and promote the membership and educate the public.

Beyhan Karahan, one of the three jurors from AIA New York presented the awards for the 2002 Excellence in Design Awards Program. She explained how interesting it was to be part of the jury and to review the work of Vermont architects.

The evening would not have been possible without the generous support of the sponsors, A.W. Hastings and Windows and Doors by Brownell, and the hard work of our outstanding executive director, Hanne Williams.
