Architecture + Design Film Series

Landscape architect Laurie Olin is responsible for many of the most iconic and beloved parks, gardens, and public spaces in this country and around the world. This portrait of an artist is told through a prism of concerns that have defined his life's work: urbanization and a lost connection to nature, economic marginalization, and the grave importance of humanity in design. Through intimate conversations, observational cinematography, and moments of quiet reflection, the film offers viewers a rare opportunity to understand the depth of Olin's influence. Both an intimate character study and a broader reflection on the art and responsibility of landscape design, the documentary encourages viewers to pause, observe, and find meaning in the world around them.
